When we were little,
we learned
to color
inside
the lines,
nice and neat,
all alike.

Out beyond the lines,
there was room to create things that were new

and unique,

and somehow we just knew that lines

were meant to be crossed.

The Gift

I leave to one—I know not who the right to see and live anew.
I will not need the sight I give,
for I will have another place to live.

I cannot leave a thought, a dream—only the chance to see a beam of light that touches each new day and a chance to find "a way."

I cannot help, or touch a hand, or point to wonders of this land.
I only leave a chance to see,
because I gave a part of me.

Know not the donor—nor the name.
It makes no difference whence it came.
Just use it well for all mankind, for now you see, who once was blind.

And I shall watch from where I live to see you use the gift I give,
to fight for truth, defy the lies—for no one really dies who gives his eyes.
