During Veteran's Day preparations, Jessica Balfour listens as Mrs. Nett reads the poem "In Flanders Field." At the assembly, the poem served as an introduction for a stirring performance by the concert choir. So how many times do you get the chance to be Gene Simmons? Sayard Ashenfelter couldn't pass this one up. That's what Homecoming week is for!

You wake to darkness. A loud noise rings in your head. Someone screams from another room. You're overcome with dread, and you close your eyes. One more minute. And then it's time to drag yourself out of bed and get ready for school.

Lisa Morrison and Kaitlin Buscher check out the quote of the day in Mrs. Nett's seminar; Emily Miller doesn't have to—she wrote it.
